Lina Buffington has been in leadership roles for more than 15 years, for mission centered nonprofit organizations and institutions of higher learning. Lina served as the Interim Executive Director for Missey, a community-based nonprofit with the mission of ending child exploitation and empowering its victims. She served as President/CEO of East Bay Permanent Real Estate Cooperative which seeks to make land and housing more accessible to community members, especially those that have been historically disenfranchised.

Growth, strategic planning and helping organizations go through transition to the next level is her goal. Working with and organizing students brings her the greatest joy. Lina has a personal commitment to NSRH's mission, "Sexual and reproductive health for women is fundamentally a social justice issue. For women to participate fully in our development and flourish as human beings, we must have full access to the resources needed to help us make informed choices about our health."
